RESCUE CREWS ARE WORKING FURIOUSLY TO SAVE 93 MINERS

Still 1200 Feet Away From Trapped Men in W. V. Mine

2 BODIES RECOVERED

Sorrowing Relatives Pray Throughout Night Near Shaft

BARTLEY, W. Va., Jan. 11.—(INS)—Working furiously throughout the night while crowds of sorrowing relatives prayed them God-speed, rescue workers this morning still were 1,200 feet away from the 93 miners trapped in No. 1 mine of the Pond Creek Pocahontas Coal Company by an explosion yesterday afternoon.

So far only two bodies have been recovered.

J. J. Hammond, a company executive, said nothing was known about the fate of the trapped men.

The miners were trapped yesterday afternoon by an explosion of unexplained origin some two and a half miles from the opening of the mine shaft. Forty-five miners working in a forward section of the shaft escaped. Huge piles of slate, stone and coal formed the barrier through which rescue workers, directed by officials of the United States Bureau of Mines, were battling.

Eight separate rescue squads were hacking their way through the mass of debris that blocked the shaft and shut off the trapped men.

Early reports were that the ventilating machinery supplying that section of the shaft was still in operation, leading to a belief that any of the miners who escaped the force of the blast might still be alive.

Several thousand persons, including the fearful families of the men at work in the exploded shaft, crowded around the mine entrance last night and through the early morning hours, waiting for word of the fate of their loved ones.

Dornier Bombers Over Kent County

London, Jan. 11.—Two huge Dornier bombers of the German aerial fleet roared over towns and villages of Kent County this afternoon, after anti-aircraft guns and British fighters had driven off other groups of invaders all along the British coast.

The two Dorniers approached the Kentish coast from the northeast at a height of 20,000 feet, passed inland and reduced their altitude to 14,000 feet. British fighters went aloft and pursued the invaders.

Youth Conference Held At Community Center

The monthly youth conference arranged by Mrs. Kathryn H. Fretz, county field supervisor, Bucks County NYA, for Bucks County NYA youth, was held Monday night at the Bristol Community Center.

Forty-eight youths turned out for the meeting. William H. Clark, the new supervisor of Bucks-Montgomery counties was presented to the youths. Mr. Clark acknowledged his introduction with a brief speech outlining some of his plans for Bucks County for the coming year. One of his most important plans is the institution of leisure time training classes for NYA youth. These classes will be in operation early in February, and are expected to be well attended.

After the conference, Ned Egnal, manager of the Bristol Theatre, gave the youth and their leaders passes to see the movie, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." The following program was enjoyed: Song service, remarks, "Our forms of government compared with other forms," Ned Egnal; solo, "God Bless America," Albert Hartman; remarks, "The U. S. Senate and how it works," Pearl Lowndes, NYA Youth; "Political Party Machines and how they work," William Mooney, NYA Youth; "The filibuster and how it works in the U. S. Senate," Robert Cassidy, NYA Youth; song, "America the Beautiful"; "The city of Washington and its Public Buildings," Mrs. Fretz. The group then visited the Bristol Theatre.

The next youth guidance meeting will be held February 19th and will be on the subject "Hygiene and Community Health."

SCHOOL STUDENTS AND AUCTIONEER ARE HURT

School Bus and Sedan Figure In Crash Near Yardley; 35 Shaken Up

BUS IS OVERTURNED

YARDLEY, Jan. 11.—When a school bus and a sedan crashed at the intersection of Lower Makefield and Black Rock Roads, near here, yesterday afternoon, 10 school pupils were hurt, and 35 shaken up. The driver of the sedan, Ira H. Cornell, Newtown auctioneer, was the most seriously injured.

The bus was overturned by the impact, 45 girls and boys being passengers in it at the time, enroute home from school.

The students treated at the office of physician include:

Ira H. Cornell, 78, suffered two lacerations of the head, sprained right wrist, slight brain concussion and contusions and lacerations of the right knee. He was also treated at a physician's office, where he was taken by Robert Steele, Morrisville, and then removed to his home, Herman Westerman, Woodside, driver of the bus, escaped injury.

The bus was about 500 feet from the school when the crash occurred. Police said the sedan struck the right rear of the bus and tipped it over on its side. All the windows in the left side of the bus were smashed, the top torn off and many of the seats torn loose. Westernman opened the emergency door in the rear and got the frightened and injured children out.

Meanwhile the parents of some of the children were notified and they hurried to the scene in autos and assisted in taking the injured to the physician's office.

Members of the Pennsylvania State Motor Patrol investigated.

Smash Window and Rob Doylestown Jewelry Store

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 11.—A jewelry store in the principal business section here was robbed early yesterday morning when a two-pound stone was hurled through a display window of the store of Holmes and Howard, East State street. The robbers got $727.25 worth of watches, diamond sets and rings.

The large plate glass window, which is located in the mid-town store, directly in the rays of a street light, was shattered in one corner by a stone, about the size of a small cantaloupe and as smooth as a pebble.

The stone cracked the window vertically and horizontally. The window is about eight by ten feet.

Chief of Police James P. Welsh, who is conducting the investigation of the bold robbery which must have taken place between 2 and 6 o'clock this morning, believes the robber used a hook to pull the cloth which is in the showcase near enough to the hole in the broken pane in order to scoop up the jewelry.

Chief of Police Welsh said Lewis Winkler, who was nearby, remembers hearing a noise, but is unable to tell what time it was.

Because the store is located on Route 202 and within a block of the busiest corner in town and police headquarters, as well as on one of the best lighted streets in this section, the robbery was particularly daring.

Cook Agreeable

Harrisburg, Jan. 11.—Republican State Chairman James F. Torrance admitted today that Jay Cooke, chairman of the Philadelphia Republican Committee, had "consented to run" for the U. S. Senate, but emphatically denied that the State GOP organization had settled on him as a candidate.

Torrance added that a series of conferences between Cooke and Republican leaders throughout the State would be held, at Cooke's request, in an effort to ascertain the support Cooke could muster in western Pennsylvania counties.

U. S. S. Charleston Aground

Panama City, Jan. 11.—Naval authorities revealed today that the U. S. S. Charleston, flagship of the special service squadron stationed at Balboa, went aground last night at the Coco Solo submarine base. Because of the mishap the extent of the damage was not revealed.

Major Naval Battle Rumored

Buenos Aires, Jan. 11.—Another major naval battle, rivaling or even exceeding the clash which ended in the scuttling of the Admiral Graf Spee, brewed today, as reports arose that the British passenger liner Highland Patriot, escorted by the cruiser Achilles, fought a German raider near Santos yesterday.

The rumor, insistent, but unconfirmed, called attention to the fact that the Highland Patriot has not yet arrived at Montevideo, Uruguay, where she was due this morning.

The Highland Patriot and the Avila Star, passenger vessels in the English-South American service, both reported on their arrival earlier in the week at Rio de Janeiro, that they had been attacked unsuccessfully by submarines off the Canary Islands.

German warships were reported patrolling the equatorial area off the Brazilian coast, waiting to convoy German ships now getting up steam at Rio de Janeiro, Pernambuco, Santos, Bahia, and other ports.

Seven ships, with full crews, are ready to obey orders from Berlin and try to run the British blockade into Germany, reports said.

Russia's biggest guns were brought into position to pound the trenches and fortifications of the line, where repeated plunges by Russians have resulted in heavy losses.

To break up the artillery offensive against the Mannerheim Line, the Russians have sent large fleets of Junkers planes to Baltic ports, the Soviet base on the north shore of Estonia.

SELLERSVILLE WATER SUPPLY IS "IN ICE"

Consumers Asked To Conserve Its Use Until There Is A Thaw

CREATES FIRE DANGER

SELLERSVILLE, Jan. 11.—Consumers of water in this borough have been asked to conserve the water until there is a thaw. There is ample water in storage but most of it is in "cold storage."

This was brought out at a meeting of Borough Council, during which time the water board presented its monthly report. The borough's 20,000,000-gallon basin, located three miles northwest of the borough, is about half full, but about three-quarters of the amount is in ice. Because of this the pumping station has been operating for the past three weeks.

William Walters, superintendent of the borough's water filter plant, told Council that the situation is bad since the big freeze choked up the catch basin with ice for more than a week.

If a fire broke out, said Mr. Walters, the situation would become very serious. Mr. Walters announced that there is a coating of about seven inches of ice on the basin, and he asked Council to warn consumers to conserve water until there is a thaw. The condition, he announced, is likely to remain the same until the weather becomes warmer.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

Playing It Both Ways

Washington, Jan. 10. BEFORE the Jackson Day dinner, word went out from usually authoritative New Deal sources that, while the President's speech would not be political, the things he wanted to say of a partisan nature would be said for him in Cleveland by the newly appointed Attorney General, Mr. Robert H. Jackson. Correspondents were tipped off that the Jackson speech was the one to watch.

THUS the 1940 New Deal strategy of playing both ends against the middle is made clear. The idea seems to be that Mr. Roosevelt will maintain publicly his noble nonpartisan pose and speak from a plane high above politics. At the same time his intimate aides and confidential friends will deal with practical politics and practical politicians in a realistic way. It is a clever scheme, provided it is not too generally seen through. The trouble with all such plans is that they are just a little too smart and that at some point the authors and sponsors often spoil their own game.

CERTAINLY Mr. Jackson lived up to the quiet advance notices of his speech. A more purely partisan utterance has not been heard from a high public official in a long time. It was so partisan, in fact, as to inspire fear lest it be a little difficult for Mr. Jackson to handle those "perfectly awful" cases involving the prosecution of certain Democratic politicians, which Mr. Murphy is getting in shape to turn over to him. Figuratively speaking, he swept the Republican party up in a corner and struck a

GREATER AMERICA

The mandate, "Go West, young man," commonly believed to have been uttered by Horace Greeley was not the expression of the great New York editor. What he said, to aspiring young men, was this: "The best business you can go into you will find in your father's farm or in his workshop. If you have no family or friends to aid you, and no prospect to take you there, turn your face to the Great West, and there build up a home and fortune." It will be noted that it was still considered respectable to build up a fortune in those days.

The line "Go West, young man,"
was written by John Babsone Lane
Soule in an article in the Terre Haute (Ind.) Express in 1851 and inspired Horace Greeley to write an editorial in the New York Tribune.

This opportunity to correct is provided by a dispatch from Omaha which quotes Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, as saying, in other words,
"Go South, young man." Mr. Knox told the Nebraska Bar Association that in South America "lies our destiny if we but have the courage to seize upon it. I have no thought of an imperialism that would extend our rule. I am thinking only of that peaceful expansion of trade, north and south, which would redound to the mutual benefit of both sections.
If we can picture South America as providing us at the present time with the same opportunity for expansion and development and mutual prosperity that the great undeveloped West offered to the eastern part of the United States 100 years ago, we will grasp the full significance of what South America means to us."

J. B. L. Soule and Horace Greeley and Frank Knox may not have been in agreement on directions, but they are one in the thought of progressive Americanism. The West, once a frontier, strange and unknown, is now as much a part of familiar America as the Atlantic coastal regions. Opportunity knocks today for closer intimacy between the United States and the nations
below the Rio Grande.

GRAVE SEQUEL

The limited censorship which the British press accepts as one of the necessities of war does not extend to criticism of the government.
Many English newspapers are denouncing Neville Chamberlain with vehemence, charging that by dismissing Hore-Belisha he has knocked under to the "high caste brass hats."

They are demanding that the truth be told openly. The general opinion seems to be that if the Secretary for War was discarded because of his democratic reforms in the army, the professed war aim of fighting for democracy is a fraud.

Reaction of a large part of the British public is along the same line.
No doubt the Prime Minister expected a rumpus but nothing of this magnitude. However pressing the need for harmony in the service, Mr.
Chamberlain has only resolved official discord by effecting a split in public opinion.

The abruptness of the removal
the recognized value of Hore-Belisha's program, and the refusal of the Secretary for War to ease the situation by accepting the Presidency of the Board of Trade, have jeopardized Britain's unity in war time.

Prime Minister Chamberlain now has sacrificed two of his key men—
Capt. Anthony Eden and Leslie Hore-Belisha.

cluded the following: Vice-president,
Henry Moore, Perkasio, R. D. No. 3;
secretary, R. Walker Jackson, Newtown; members of the executive committee: Leon M. Bishop, Loux's Corner; Ray Williams, Narberth; William Landis, East Greenville; Henry Rosenberger, Hilltown, and George Davis, Norristown.

In the absence of the secretary,
Clarence Leight, Quakertown, R. D. No.
1, served as the secretary.

In a round table discussion Ray Williams, of Pennhurst Farms, Nar-berth, stressed the importance of the Bucks and Montgomery Ayrshire breeders taking part in the National Dairy Show which will be held in Harrisburg next Fall.

"I think the Bucks and Montgomery county Ayrshire breeders should begin now to make plans to exhibit cattle at the National Dairy Show, particularly since it is being held in Harrisburg and may become a permanent show holding place depending on the success of the next show," said Mr. Williams.

Mr. Williams also pointed out that the Bucks dairymen should enlist the efforts of the Bucks 4-H Club boys and girls who are able to exhibit calves and urge them to make entries.
Assistant County Agent William H.
Wilson was in attendance.

In order to ascertain what type of programs the dairymen wish, President Mumbauer handed the members slips of paper in order to indicate their preference in writing their choices.

ordinary remedies, says Doctor

Pour yourself a teaspoon of Buckley's

Feel its quick powerful purgent action spread through throat, head and bronchial

A "News Year"
Resolution

I resolve to read my newspaper with my mental eyes open. . . .

I resolve to read, not merely the headlines, but the full story behind them.
Only in this way can I be sure to obtain complete, objective information about the changing world I live in and am a part of.

I resolve to read the editorials, which interpret the news and give a reasoned basis for thought about it. In this way I can create an attitude about life in my own country, and abroad, which may develop into a philosophy.

I resolve to read the advertisements,
which—as faithfully as the headlines—announce worth-while new developments in the world of industry, of transportation and of commerce. . . . In this way I can add to my fund of useful knowledge; learn to discriminate between the good and the seeming good;
and, by purchasing only what is advertised, I can provide for myself and my family, thriftily, safely and pleasantly.

Invited guests were: the Misses Ruth Flanagan, Viola Smedburg, Enid Whyatt, Jean Voswinkel, Sarah Craig, Gladys Curzon, Ruth Adams, Helen Meyer, Nellie Glerum, Minnie Van Soest, Doris Wright, Helen Oldorf, Doris Barr, Dorothy Cruger, Roberta Halloway, Gertrude Schmidt, Eleanor Corrigan, Ruth Satterfield, Helen Beckett, Pearl Greenley, Marie Craven, Ann Melvin; Mrs. Theodore Smith, Mrs. Arthur Camwell, Mrs. Dayton Pegely, Mrs. Daniel Hines, Mrs. Eleanor Turner, Mrs. Joseph Schindler, and Mrs. John MacArthur.

Bridge and pinocle were enjoyed, and prizes were linen handkerchiefs. A midnight supper was served, consisting of shrimp salad, hot butter rolls, assorted pickles, potato chips, candies, nuts, coffee and tea. The centerpiece was a "shower" cake decorated in pastel shades.

Miss Flanagan will be married to John F. Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wright, Tullytown, on January 20th, in Passaic, N. J.

GRAND THEATRE

"The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex," technicolor production starring Bette Davis and Errol Flynn has its first local showing today at the Grand Theatre.

Bette Davis is cast as the self-willed, vain and domineering Queen Elizabeth, torn between her love of England and its people and her overwhelming love for the handsome and dashing young Earl of Essex. Flynn as Essex has precisely the type of role in which he has endeared himself to audiences the world over—that of a handsome, swash-buckling hero, as victorious in love as he is in war.

GRUNDY FIVE TO MEET PROFY TEAM IN LEAGUE TILT

Game Will Afford Opportunity To Again Deadlock The Race

R. & H. VS. MANHATTAN

Radiomen May Create A Tie For First Place Position

With a chance to again deadlock the Bristol Basketball League, the Profy team will play the Grundy five tonight on the Italian Mutual Aid floor. In the second game scheduled, Manhattan meets Rohm & Haas.

The last meeting of the Profy-Grundy teams resulted in a 32-31 triumph for the radiomen and sent the circuit into a triple deadlock. Tonight if the Mill streeters are victorious, they will be in a tie with the woolen twisters for first place.

Manager Grimes will use Johnny Slaven, Gus Carnvale, Charlie Hughes, Ray Dorsey and Tommy Profy in his starting line-up. Manager George Hermann, whose boys are playing top-notch ball, will have in his starting line-up: Johnny Zack, Bucky Buckman, Reds Gallagher, Eddie Nowinski, and Jesse Vanzant.

While the battle for first place is going on, there will also be fireworks in the Manhattan-Rohm and Haas tilt. These clubs are fighting it out for third place. Rohm and Haas is exactly one game behind the soap workers and need this triumph to be in the running for the playoff tilts.

A defeat for the chemical workers may prove quite disastrous as it would give the Falls team a chance to creep up and get into the running for third place.

Rohm and Haas will have in its starting line-up: Joe Roe, Johnny Cole, Sammy Smith, Ralph Cahall, and Bobby Weideman and Manhattan will start: Punkie Zeffries, Freddie Barbetta, Joe Snyder, Nick Hufnell, and Joe Gallagher.

The largest crowd of the season is expected to be on hand to witness the games. Opening tap-off takes place at eight o'clock sharp.

TWO UPSETS SURPRISE SUBURBAN LEAGUE FANS

BRISTOL SUBURBAN LEAGUE

Results of last night: Croydon, 28; Fifth Ward, 3; Franklin, 33; Shamrocks, 10; Celtics, 28; King, 25.

Two upsets greeted the followers of the Bristol Suburban League last night in the games played on the Croydon court. In the first, the Fifth Ward Sporting Club went down to a miserable defeat at the hands of the Croydon Y. M. A., 28-3; and in the second, the Celtics won their first game of the year trouncing the King A. A. five of Cornwallis, 28-25. In the other game played Franklin trounced the South Langhorne Shamrocks, 33-10.

The victory for the Franklin team put it in undisputed possession of first place in the loop. With Rocco Sagolla and Anthony Palumbo leading the attack and DeLuca and Ciarella doing fine guarding work, the Franklin attack clicked from the start and was never headed.

The South Langhorne team was lost from the start. The Franklin defense had it completely baffled and only in the last ten seconds of the game were the Shamrocks able to score a field goal and that came when Petrick sunk in a long field goal after being mouse-trapped.

The Croydon win over Fifth Ward was the biggest shock of the season. Fifth Ward had won all of its games by over-whelming scores but could do nothing against the boys of Henry Morgan who had a scoring night on. Fifth Ward was held scoreless from the field until the last two seconds when Plehant registered a two-point.

Oppman and Cahall played a bang-up game for the Croydon team. Oppman counted twelve points and Cahall six which along was enough to drown the Fifth Warders.

Poor marksmanship from the foul line caused the Cornwallis King team to bow to the Celtics, 28-25. It was the first win of the season for the Celts who made six out of twelve fouls while the losers had 3 out of 13. Barbetta and Ludwig played good for the winners with Taylor and Price starring for the losers.

The Ford Service team won 3 points from Felix Cafeteria. Al Moffo hit 572, Amisson 645. The feature of the evening was Joe Amisson hitting 255. Joe made nine straight strikes but a "Jersey" hit in the 10th gave him a split, and spoiled his chances for a perfect game.

The mine was one of the most modern in the West Virginia fields, producing an average of 1,500,000 tons of coal a year.

R. E. Salvati, vice-president of the coal company who was assisting in directing rescue operations, issued an early statement saying two men were dead, 45 had escaped and 85 were still trapped. This was before the seven bodies were reported recovered.

The blast affected three sections of the horizontal shaft, Salvati said. He said he believed that the men in two sections would be able to set up brattices to escape death.

Salvati was in touch with the rescue crews who told him they were encountering heavy slate falls but not as heavy as first expected.

The shaft into the mine extends from a depth of 620 feet and then fans out horizontally more than two miles underground.

The cause of the blast was still undetermined at a late hour. The time was fixed at 2:20 yesterday afternoon.

It was not until some time after the disaster occurred that it had been definitely determined it was an explosion. At first, the men in other sections thought it was merely a heavy slate fall.

Roy Ashworth, a mine motorman at the foot of the shaft at the time of the explosion, said he didn't hear a blast but that "a big cloud of dust rolled over me."

The 45 men who escaped did not know an explosion occurred until they reached the shaft bottom after stopping work at 4 o'clock, it was said.

An early report that the bodies of seven men had been recovered was later revised to two known dead.

It was at first believed that only about 78 men were trapped in the three blasted sections of the diggings more than 600 feet underground but after closer checkups mine officials early this morning raised the figure to 93.

The rescuers, working in small compact squads, were waging a race with the deadly gases that usually follow mine explosions.

A morgue was hurriedly set up at the next mining community, about 15 miles from here, to receive any bodies and speed identification.

Slate falls which impeded the efforts of the rescue squads delayed the drive to reach the entombed men.

As the hours wore on, hope for the safety of the men faded among the rescuers but burned brightly in the hearts of the hundreds of their kin clustered around bonfires through the night.

Unless the trapped men succeeded in throwing up barricades to keep the gases from seeping into their underground traps it was doubtful that they could remain alive for long.

The rescue crews, equipped with oxygen, worked in 30-minute relays. Their task was to remove the debris, dig new openings, shore up the roof and sides and establish a ventilating system.

Forty-five miners working at the time of the blast escaped. It was not until they reached the outside that they learned an explosion had shaken the mine and not a heavy slate fall as they had at first believed.

The trapped men were between two and two and a half miles away from the shaft opening.

Pupils Hear of "Crime, And How To Avoid It"

ables and going out with those whom they know nothing about. To illustrate his point the speaker cited instances which have come under his personal observation of where girls and boys have gone to places of public amusements, made friends with strangers and before they had sufficient time to look into the habits of those individuals, had become very friendly with them, and as a result became enmeshed in the clutches of the police.

He gave instances of where girls meeting strange men had been implicated in crimes and had been used merely as dupes for the criminals whom they thought were their friends.

Mr. Russo was very strong in his condemnation of crime "movies" which he urged the students to avoid seeing, and he gave it as his opinion that such pictures have a tendency to create interest in the exploits of the criminals and more or less glorify their exploits and criminal careers.

The Bucks County detective traced the beginning of crime right back to the point where children begin to disobey their parents. He made it plain that the boys and girls who fall into the hands of the police are not the ones who obey their parents and follow the careful instructions which are given in most of the homes. Of course there are the exceptions, said the speaker, "sometimes those who have been given the very best of training at home, and who have been reared in the very best of environment go wrong, but they are the exceptional cases."

"Obey your parents, live good clean lives, following the instructions of your teachers, choose your companions with care, and visit only those places in seeking amusements which you know are conducted in the right and proper manner," was the advice of the speaker.

"Do not fear the police," said Mr. Russo. "Come to Chief of Police Linford J. Jones or me at any time, and tell us if you are in difficulty. We want to be your friends, and you have nothing to fear. We're here to help you in any way that we can."

The speaker urged the students to give the police information about those who are violating the law if they have such information. "You will not be a 'rat' for informing us," said the speaker. "In my opinion the person who is a 'rat' is the one who knows information which would aid in the apprehension of a criminal but refuses to give that information to the authorities."

match to what he seemed to regard as a heap of rubbish. By contrast, his eulogy of the Democratic party set a new record in fulsome.

THE gist of the Jackson argument, however, was that the matchless character and ability of Mr. Roosevelt, coupled with his appeal to the great mass of independent voters, were the only things that had enabled the Democratic party to triumph in 1932 and 1936. Logically it followed that the one way for the Democratic party to triumph in 1940 was to renominate Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Jackson climaxed his address with an impassioned plea to the President not to commit himself irrevocably against a third term.

THERE being every reason to believe that Mr. Roosevelt knew what Mr. Jackson was going to say in Cleveland, and that Mr. Jackson knew what Mr. Roosevelt was going to say in Washington, it does seem that the candor of both is considerably less than one hundred per cent. For example, the President preaches nonpartisanship to the country just after he has sanctioned a completely partisan speech by one of his chief spokesmen and friends. And Mr. Jackson, knowing well that the President had no intention of committing himself against a third term, pleads with him not to do something he knows he hadn't the remotest notion of doing. When the facts are examined the hollow-ness of the two speeches is apparent.

IT ISN'T necessary to point out that in 1932, when Mr. Jackson attributes the Democratic victory wholly to Mr. Roosevelt, there was practically unanimous agreement that any Democrat could have beaten Mr. Hoover that year. But his thesis that the Democrats always win by getting the independent vote and never get any Republicans ought not to be passed without comment. Mr. Jackson elaborately builds up his theory with figures from Presidential elections since 1920, reiterating his statement that the Democrats can never hope to convert or corral any of the regular Republican troops.

THE absurdity of this statement in the light of the 1936 election facts is apparent. What does Mr. Jackson think those two million and more Negro voters in the debatable States who voted for Mr. Roosevelt that year were? Independents? What does he think swung that great Negro vote, for so many years the basic asset of the Republican party, over to the Democrats? Mr. Roosevelt's personal charm and principles? Mr. Jackson knows as well as anyone that what brought over those two million regular Republicans in 1936 was a remarkable combination of WPA relief money, Federal patronage and a long, elaborate and expensive campaign of coddling.

IF HE does not know these things let him ask Mr. Farley, or Senator Guffey, who, with the enthusiastic co-operation of Mr. Roosevelt, started the drive to capture the colored vote in 1933. Or Mr. Stanley High, who headed the Good Neighbor League, which was one agency most effective in bringing them over. Or he might ask Mr. John Hamilton or any other of a hundred Republican politicians who suffered acutely as they watched these millions of regular Republicans being corralled in 1936. Really, Mr. Jackson ought not to make ridiculous assertions of that kind. They are so manifestly wrong as to throw doubt on other things he states as fact.

THE truth is that, though in their manner of delivery they could hardly be improved, neither Mr. Jackson nor Mr. Roosevelt enhanced his reputation by his Jackson Day speech. Mr. Jackson's facts and figures do not stand up and his political theories bog down. As for Mr. Roosevelt, the character of the speech substantiates the report that, for the time at least, he has relegated Mr. Tommy Corcoran to the rear as his literary aide. Whoever wrote this speech, it is clear Mr. Corcoran did not. If he had it would have been less innocuous and of higher literary merit. Nor would it have contained two dialect stories of great age and dubious humor.
